

The Gift of Healing- a bespoke brochure for First Nations Peoples

Clinical trials can greatly benefit the health of First Nations people as they provide new and promising treatment options for a range of diseases and they can support the improvement of health for the next generation.

TrialHub commissioned renowned Victorian Indigenous artist, Dixon Bayil to design and develop an information brochure to support greater understanding of clinical trials for the First Nations community. You can find the new information brochure here.

Dixon created The Gift of Healing to acknowledge that healing experiences can sometimes feel isolating and lonely. This art reminds us that we are part of a community with an abundance of strength and resilience. Our journeys are guided by such deep cultural and spiritual connection to country and each other and that taking ownership of our healing is a powerful gift we give ourselves and our communities.

Research Consumer Spotlight

We extend our warmest congratulations to A/Prof Kerry Fitzmaurice on five years of voluntary service at Northern Health. We deeply appreciate her time, commitment, and contributions to advancing research, and we look forward to continuing our work together as we enhance consumer involvement in research.

Important update- Eligibility Criteria for Principal Investigators at Northern Health

To reflect NH's commitment to maintaining excellence in research practice and ensuring all research conducted within our health service is compliant with institutional and national best practice- information about what is required and who can be a Principal Investigator at Northern Health is now available on our website.
